CPS is moving into on-line courses to: allow people not near a squadron, whose schedules conflict with in class courses, whose squadron does not offer the class, shift workers, younger generation used to on-line, etc., to take our courses. Eventually all of our courses will be on line. These courses will be offered on a learning management system called Moodle, or using Citrix Go to meeting webinar technology. Courses will be available on-line for registered students 24/7. Moodle has been used Worldwide by Universities, Colleges, Corporations for quite a few years. Most Universities have been offering on-line courses for at least 25 years. These courses will not replace traditional in-class instruction. In fact, in class instructors will be able to use the on-line material in classes. For example, there may be videos in the on-line class that are not with the regular material.

If you would be interested in tutoring an online course please contact Roger Pimm, rogerpimm70@gmail.com.

It would be nice to keep publishing the Dry Rot as many times a year as possible, but, to make it interesting, a supply of articles to include in each publication would be great. If you had a boating adventure this past summer maybe you could write a short article and send it to me.
